A WOMAN STOPPED HIM.

She Would Have No Stereopticon Agent Going Through Her Rooms.

Jersey City Democrats yesterday were discussing the failure of an attempt to open the campaign on Monday night with a display of ereopticon pictures illustrating imperialism at Newark and Jersey avenues and a crowd was present. H. B. Weaver, who was to ex-libit the pictures, announced at 8 o'clock that the display would be postponed, but gave no reason for it and a shout of derision went up from the crowd.

It was not until yesterday that the reason for the postponement was made public. Then it was learned that when Mr. Weaver undertook to go to the roof of the house on which the streen was to be placed the tenants refused to admit him. He was met at the door by a woman named Mrs. Sarah Joyce, who told him that while he might have secured the consent of the owner of the house, as he said, he could not go to the roof until he had secured the consent of the tenants, and she for one would not allow him to make a show of the house.

PUZZLE IN IMMIGRATION LAWS. Can a Man Once Admitted Be Barred Out on a Second Arrival Here? NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 28 .- A curious case came before the Board of Inquiry of the Immigration Bureau to-day in regard to Alexander Dean, a negro who arrived here on Saturday on the British steamship Montcalm, a mule ship from Cape Town, South Africa. Dean was one of the muleteers who sailed from New The Mancurres of Jane" in Chicago, and. | Orleans to South Africa, going on the steamship Monarch. Under the terms of the contract the British officers who ship muleteers goers, who do not have to see a name in big from this port agree to bring them back here free of charge, if they want to come. Dean did not like the work in South Africa and demanded that this clause in the contract be carried out. He was brought back here, but manded that this clause in the contract be carried out. He was brought back here, but was stopped by the immigration inspectors on the ground that he came to this country in violation of the immigration laws.

Dean is a Jamaican negro, who came to Mobile six months ago, and from there went to New Orleans to get a place as a muleter. The question in the case is whether an immigrant who has once been admitted to this country who leaves here shortly after on a round voyage and returns in a destitute condition, can be barred out by the provisions in the immigration laws as a person likely to become a public charge Dean is a coal-black negro, of low intelligence and illiterate. He is without money and without a trade and under the immigration laws would be kept out; but the fact that he had been an immigrant before, had been passed then, and had established himself in this country brought up the question whether his subsequent departure and a change in his condition could bar him out when he returned a second time. On this the Immigration Board of Inquiry split equally; two of the members voted to deport Dean because he had no money and was not a native of this country, while the other two voted to admit him because in sending him back to New Orleans the British transportation officer in Cape Colony did his duty, and in bringing him back here to New Orleans the captain of the Montcalm acted in good faith.

Under the rules, when two members of the Board of Special Inquiry vote not to admit, the vote is final, and Dean will be sent back to Cape Town on board the steamship Montcalm, which brought him here. The decision will leave him practically without a country, as he capnot land here and cannot get back to his old home in Jamaica.

The court will not reopen until Monday. Then Mrs. Herman will apply for a writ of habeas corpus. The police will see to it that Herman does not, meanwhile, remove the boy from Jersey City.

On Monday night Allery was in one of the concert halls at the beach when he was told that some one wanted to see him outside. When he stepped outside a number of soldiers jumped on him and threw him down. The police heard of the row and ran to Allery's rescue. One of the soldiers explained that Allery was believed to be the man who led the attack on the soldiers when Private Smith was injured. None of those present had been in the fight and the policemen, to pacify the soldiers, suggested that Allery be taken to the hospital at the fort for identification by Smith. Allery agreed to this and, guarded by the policemen, the march to the fort was begun. A large crowd followed. Allery was taken before Smith in the hospital, but Smith said he was not the man who struck him. The officers at the fort declared that Allery was exonerated and he was released and sent out under a guard. The guard boarded a trolley car with Allery and did not leave him until a mile away from the fort. Smith's jaw was broken by a blow from the

When asked whether the league would have agents at the track to see if pool selling was going on. Secretary Thrasher replied:

"I cannot say just what we may do, but this can be said: An effort will be made to locate the responsibility for the enforcement of the law at these races. We shall do our best to have the responsibility placed one way or other so that the public can know whether the authorities cannot put a stop to the violations of law or whether they do not wish to stop it. In either case the necessity for an organization like ours will be apparent."

Nothing was heard from him until aday or two ago when Werner received the following letter, dated from the barracks at Kiel:

"DEAR PARENTS: I am already four days in barracks. As soon as I came here they seized me and now I have to drill."

Werner did not bring the matter formally before the union, but consulted with some of the members as to whether the union would make complaint to the authorities in Washington. In the meantime he will take legal advice and will probably appeal to Washington personally.

The Republican members have decided to make no definite plans until they find how the other side stands. Mr. Roberts said:

"To a man we will accept an absolutely fair bill granting equal representation to both parties. We will oppose any unfair law."

Gov. Beckham's message was brief and said in part on the Goebel law:

"By reason of the strong prejudice against it many people have been led to believe that the change was a mistake and the law a bad one. This prejudice against it, whether reasonable or not, is sufficient to justify your consideration and warrant you to take some action in securing a more satisfactory law. Inspector Harley went to the District Attorney's office yesterday with several of his detectives who have been working on the Scharn murder and had a long consultation with Assistant District Attorney McIntyre. When it was over Mr. McIntrye sent for Coroner Fitzpatrick. The inquest in the Scharn case is set down for Friday next. Mr. McIntyre told the Coroner that the police were anxious to have the inquest put back for another week to give them a chance to clear up several points in the story told by the dead girl's brother now in the Tombs, whom they have promised to charge with the murder despite the allibit he has set up. The inquest will be delayed.

The police it was learned are still nursing the theory that the girl was killed in the afternoon. They have discovered a Mrs. Butler, a neighbor, who asserts that the portieres of which so much has been said in the case, were taken in by the girl just before that time. Young Scharn, it is now said had $4 in his possession when he was arrested. Kate had drawn her salary, $5, on the morning before she was killed. Out of this she had made a few purchases. The police assert that she ought to have had about $4 and they failed to find that $4 in the flat. When they asked Scharn where he had obtained the money he had, the detectives now say he said he had worked for it in a place in Beekman street. This was not true, as the boy had not worked for two months.

"We still believe young Scharn committed the crime," said Inspector Harley last night, "and within a few days I hope to be in possession of enough evidence to convict him of the murder." to give them a chance to clear up several points

Steam Got Up in Her Boilers Testerday—To Be Fitted for Freight Service?

The Bremen, which was beached on the Weehawken flats after being towed from the big Hoboken water front fire, was floated yesterday. Steam was got up in her boilers and they were found to be in good condition. At the office of the North German Lloyd Company in Hoboken yesterday nothing could be learned as to what would be done with the Bremen when she is ready to be removed. A report was circulated that she would be towed to Newport News for temporary repairs and then taken to Germany to be refitted for freight service.

A party of men, among whom, it was said, were several. Converted the state of the seat and held on while the car bowled around the curves to Mount Vernon. The conductor turned the animal over to the night starter, who took him into the waiting room and chained him with rule and watching him pass his cap around for passengers had fun with him by feeding him with nute and watching him pass his cap around for pennies. It was about midning the waiting room and chained him with rule and watching him pass his cap around for pennies. It was about midning the waiting room me. Oh.
